birth of Christ. A modern liberal, especially if he majored in political science at Harvard, might ignore Pericles, if he ever heard of him, and say that he was in favor of washing the baby but could see nothing wrong with throwing the baby out with the dirty bath water.

Alexander Fraser Tytler, also known as Lord Woodhouselee, was a Scottish historian who lived from 1747 until 1813. His son, Patrick Fraser Tytler, who lived from 1791 until 1849, wrote a history of Scotland and is almost as famous in British history as his father. The elder Tytler, about the year 1801, commented on how a democracy can give way to a dictatorship through excess taxation, and his son later admitted that he could not improve on these comments of his father:

"A democracy cannot exist as a permanent form of government. It can only exist until the voters discover they can vote themselves largess out of the public treasury, with the result that democracy always collapses over a loose fiscal policy, always to be followed by a dictatorship."

Neither Alexander Fraser Tytler nor his son could foresee the advent of the New Deal, the Fair Deal, or the New Frontier. Their comments were based on studies of the histories of all democracies and all republics, going back to ancient Greece and Rome.

Assuming that the Tytlers were correct, the United States of America is heading toward a dictatorship. Increasing taxes and finding projects to spend more money, such as foreign aid, are two of the many objectives of the modern liberals in America.

Any person in public office who votes to increase spending, or to grant loans which will never be repaid, is taking the position of the modern liberals. Voting to reduce taxes, unless such vote is coupled with a decrease in expenditures, is a cheap tinued' to grow with your increasing support and in growing we have been able through the proceeds from this annual event to support more youth activities in Torrance, such as Little League, Pony League, Babe Ruth League, Pop Warner Football, and Scouting of all types. We have always been in need of your support but if ever we needed support or a helping hand it was this year.

With the events that have occurred these past few months in our city and the adverse publicity our Police Department has been exposed to if ever we needed a helping hand, a kind word, a pat on the back, or a sign of support it was now. Your response to our Show and Dance served as that helping hand or show of support and words cannot express the lift or morale factor this has given all of us.

You, the public have never let us down and in the face of the criticism heaped upon

Local Business Teachers, Students Meet at El Camino

Business teachers and students from Torrance High School attended a conference at El Camino College with other educators, students, and business leaders from the area. Mrs. Syble Taylor and Forrest McKeown, business education teachers on the Tartar campus, selected 15 top students to attend the conference.

Our department we have done our best to hold our heads high in the finest tradition of law enforcement and prove to one and all that we, as a Police Department, are worthy of your trust and support.

Thank you again for your support and rest assured that in addition to being deeply appreciative of your support and confidence we will not fail you, and will continue to serve you, giving you our very best at all times.

Collette Landerville entered the speech contest for the Torrance students, while Sandra McEihose competed for the "Miss Business" title. Pat Lewandowski competed in the "Mr. Business" contest.

As part of the conference, students were interviewed by businessmen in simulated job interviews. James E. Delaney spoke to the group on "How to Get Along with the Boss," and Tobias Santarelli, a Fontana High School student, spoke on "The How and Why of Banking."
